The purpose of this virtual resource is to answer questions and provide general information to families and early education and care providers on how to successfully include young children with disabilities in early childhood programs.

Click on the links below or use the navigation bar on the left to discover facts about inclusion and how you can help make a difference in the lives of children and families in your community.

These resources represent our best collective thinking to date. If you know of additional promising resources or materials that you would like to see included here, please contact the Florida Central Directory: lalong@centraldirectory.org

WHAT IS INCLUSION?

The term “inclusion,” when used to speak of children with special needs in a classroom setting, has many historic uses, variations, and applications. Among other terms used to describe similar intents or models: mainstreaming, integration, normalization. At the core, however, is the central belief that all opportunities for learning and advancement should be moving toward the wider inclusion of children with disabilities into mainstream settings.

Florida Birth to Five Learning and Developmental Standards

These standards describe an age appropriate understanding to the way young children think, create and engage in the early learning process. Whether you are a trainer, a classroom teacher, a family child care provider or a parent, this site provides you with valuable information and tips for supporting children’s development in their first years of life. On this site, you can search the Standards in several ways, making it easy for you to plan experiences and interactions with the young children in your care. You can also download a printable version of the Standards.

FIRST WORDS Project

Is a longitudinal research investigation in the Autism Institute in the College of Medicine at Florida State University. The major goal is to identify early red flags of developmental language disorders, autism spectrum disorders, and other communication delays in children under 24 months of age. Through research findings, they aim to improve screening tools and early detection of communication disorders by maximizing the role of the family, which will help families obtain intervention services earlier.

Santa Rosa Early Learning Coalition

The Early Learning Coalition (ELC) of Santa Rosa received a Warm Line call about a two year old child, who was banging her head in the child care center. I (Inclusion Contact person) visited that site the next day and observed the child banging her head and punching herself in the face at a rate of several times every few minutes. The child never attempted play and did not eat nor sleep the entire day while in care. In addition the mother reported the child care setting is new, but she had not exhibited any of the behaviors in the home setting. After discussion with mother the child was referred to the Western Panhandle Early Steps.

Early Steps provided the child evaluation to determine eligibility to the program.

After determination, an Individualized Family Support Plan meeting was held and the child began to receive speech therapy once per week in the child care setting through Early Steps, early intervention from the Infant Toddler Developmental Specialist through Santa Rosa Prekindergarten Program for Children with Disabilities, as well as technical assistance from the Early Learning Coalition.

After several months, the child moved to a specialized child care facility with Prekindergarten Program for Children with Disabilities funding the half day classes. In addition, the ELC reimbursed the provider the special needs rate for the school readiness (subsidized) portion of the child's day because the facility provided speech and behavior therapy onsite. The family also receives a weekly visit from a therapist with Infant Mental Health, Systems Solutions for Dyadic therapy. The child and family are having positive outcomes.

Through community collaboration the child and family continue to receive services to best meet the needs of the family!

Successful Community Program Collaboration and Inclusive Services

In order to successfully meet the needs of children with disabilities and special needs, the Florida State University Early Head Start program collaborates with the local Early Steps program, public school district, and other local providers serving families with infants and toddlers. Coordinating staff from these provider programs meet monthly, while program administrators meet quarterly. The monthly meetings of coordinating staff were initially focused on coordination of transition services for children from Part C to Part B. However, as partnering staff developed closer working relationships these meetings evolved into increased collaboration, with programs developing formal and informal procedures for information sharing, gathering of parent permission, additional referrals to other agencies, and shared arrangements to facilitate the evaluation/assessment and service delivery process.

To enhance the limited availability of therapeutic services in rural Gadsden County, the Early Head Start program partners with a private Speech and Language Pathologist to provide inclusive therapy services for enrolled children that have qualified for Part C services, as well as for children whose therapy is provided through Medicaid eligibility. The Speech and Language Pathologist provides therapy for children not only in their classrooms, but on joint home visits with families and staff, and during socialization groups held twice monthly for children and parents. The therapist's modeling of language strategies with children in these various inclusive settings enables staff, parents, and family members to reinforce children's communication skills during their daily family, home, program, and classroom routines. These new skills for language promotion gained by staff and parents benefit other children as well.
